

Marriage and Child Wellbeing the Focus of New Issue of Brookings/Princeton Future of Children Journal

The Brookings Institution and the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University are pleased to announce the release of the newest volume of their jointly published journal, The Future of Children, "Marriage and Child Wellbeing" (Vol. 15, No. 2). This issue features eight articles on marriage and its effects on children, presenting evidence that stable marriages can improve children's emotional, intellectual, and economic well-being, and that some well-designed marriage-promotion initiatives may benefit children and families.

Please take a few minutes to read the Executive Summary.

This issue is accompanied by a policy brief, "The Decline in Marriage: What to Do," authored by Ron Haskins, senior editor and co-director of the Center and Families at the Brookings Institution; Sara McLanahan, editor-in-chief and director of the Center for Research and Child Wellbeing at Princeton University; and Elisabeth Donahue, associate editor and lecturer at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University.

This mailing provides subscribers with periodic updates on the journal's new releases and activities. We hope you find this information useful in your work to improve the lives of low-income children and families.

If your colleagues would also like to receive this e-mail, please pass this along and ask them to subscribe by following the directions at the end of this message.

The Future of Children: A Publication of The Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University and The Brookings Institution.